Nexora Solutions

Remote Work Policy

Effective Date: January 1, 2026 | Applies to: All employees classified as remote-eligible

This policy outlines who can work remotely at Nexora Solutions, what's expected while doing it, and what happens if the rules aren't followed. It applies to all full-time and part-time employees approved for remote or hybrid work. Read it in full before requesting remote status — your manager will assume you have.

1. Eligibility

Not every role can be done remotely, and not every employee who wants remote work will be approved. Eligibility is based on job function, performance history, and business need — not tenure alone.

- Employees must have completed their 90-day probationary period and received a "meets expectations" rating or higher on their most recent review.
- Roles that require physical presence (e.g., facilities, on-site IT support, lab work) are not eligible, regardless of employee preference.
- Remote work requests are submitted through the HR portal and require sign-off from the employee's direct manager and department head.
- Approval is role-specific and can be revoked if performance drops or business needs change — remote status is a privilege tied to the job, not a permanent entitlement.
- Fully remote, hybrid (minimum 2 days on-site per week), and fully on-site arrangements are all available depending on role and approval.

2. Work Hours & Availability

Remote work doesn't mean flexible hours across the board. Nexora operates on a core-hours model so teams can collaborate in real time.

- Core hours are 10:00 AM – 3:00 PM in your local team's primary time zone. You must be online, reachable, and available for meetings during this window.
- Outside core hours, you may adjust your schedule with manager approval, as long as you complete a full workday (typically 8 hours) and meet your deadlines.
- If you'll be unavailable during core hours for an appointment or personal matter, notify your manager in advance — a heads-up in Slack is sufficient for anything under 2 hours.
- Full-day absences still require standard PTO requests, whether you're remote or on-site.

3. Equipment & Expense Reimbursement

Nexora covers the essentials for a functional home office. Here's exactly what's included:

- Laptop: Nexora provides a company laptop configured with required security software. Personal devices may not be used for work involving client or company data.

- Internet stipend: $50 per month, paid via payroll, to offset home internet costs. No receipts required — this is a flat stipend.
- One-time home office setup: Up to $300 reimbursed in your first 60 days for a desk, chair, or monitor. Submit receipts through the expense portal within 30 days of purchase.
- Ongoing supplies: Minor items (mouse, keyboard, headset) up to $75/year are reimbursable with receipts.
- Equipment issued by Nexora remains company property and must be returned within 10 business days of separation from the company.

4. Security Requirements

Working remotely doesn't relax our security standards — if anything, it raises the stakes. These requirements are non-negotiable.

- VPN required: Connect to the company VPN before accessing any internal systems, shared drives, or client data. No exceptions, even for "quick" tasks.
- Public Wi-Fi is off-limits for any work involving sensitive, client, or financial data — this includes coffee shops, airports, and hotel networks. Use your phone's hotspot or a trusted network instead.
- Password policy: Minimum 12 characters, changed every 90 days, no reuse of your last 5 passwords. Multi-factor authentication (MFA) is mandatory on all company accounts.
- Lock your screen any time you step away from your device, even at home.
- Report lost devices, suspected phishing attempts, or any security incident to IT within 1 hour of discovery — delays here are treated as seriously as the incident itself.

5. Communication Expectations

Being remote means your responsiveness is how your team knows you're working. Keep it predictable.

- Slack: Respond to direct messages within 2 hours during core hours. If you're heads-down and can't respond immediately, set a status update so people know.
- Email: Respond within 1 business day for internal emails, and within 4 business hours for anything marked urgent or client-facing.
- Meetings: Camera on for team meetings and client calls unless you've flagged a connectivity issue in advance.
- Availability status: Keep your Slack status current — "away," "in a meeting," or "focus time" are all fine, but an inaccurate status that misleads your team is not.

6. Policy Violations

Remote work is a privilege extended to employees who use it responsibly. Violations are handled consistently, regardless of role or tenure.

- First violation (e.g., missed core hours without notice, late security incident reporting): verbal warning and documented conversation with your manager.

- Second violation: written warning placed in your personnel file, and a required check-in cadence with your manager for 30 days.
- Third violation, or any serious security breach (e.g., using public Wi-Fi for client data, sharing VPN credentials, ignoring MFA requirements): revocation of remote work privileges, and possible disciplinary action up to and including termination, depending on severity.
- Deliberate policy circumvention — such as falsifying availability or misrepresenting hours worked — is treated as a serious violation regardless of prior history.

Questions about this policy should be directed to your manager or the People Operations team. This policy is reviewed annually and may be updated as business needs evolve.
